次の説明文とそれに続くスケッチの内容に合致するように、下の問1~問5の質問に対す IV る答えとして最も適切なものを、下の①~④の中から一つ選び、その番号で答えなさい。

I made a quick sketch of some of my friends while we were having a picnic at the park. John, the oldest, is on the left. He's really funny. He's married to Mary. She is the smartest. She's in the middle, and has really long hair. Their son's name is Simon, he likes playing baseball. Second from the right is Sue. She is a big music fan and is also really good at playing the drums. Mark is on her right, and he's really into body building. A big strong guy! Hiding behind Sue is Harry. He's a bit shy and quiet. Lying down in the front is Jessie. She is the clown of the group, always making jokes and being silly. I've also added myself in the back, between Mary and Simon.

They are a really fun group to hang out with. We usually get together on Saturdays or Sundays to eat out, have a picnic or just hang out. I'm lucky to have them as friends, even if I'm not very good at drawing them!

間1 Which ones in the sketch are Simon, Sue and Jessie?

- ① B.E.D (2) D. B. E.
- (3) B, G, E
- ④ C, E, G

間 2 Where is Simon's father?

- ① A (2) B
- (3) F
- ④ H

問 3 Who is the cleverest person in the group? ① A

- ② D
- ③ E ④ G

間 4 Which one drew the picture? (1) A

- (2) C
- (3) E
- (4) F

問5 How often do they meet?

- ① only at picnics (2) at hangouts (3) most weekends
- ④ not so often

Statistics are very useful. They are used by governments to help them make policies that affect all our lives, by companies to decide on what to produce and sell, by scientists in their research and in the news when reporting about the economy, society, and so on. However, (1) they can also confuse people either deliberately, or because the person using the statistic doesn't understand them properly either. A basic knowledge of statistics is very important to understand the world around us.

-5-

A very common statistic is the average. It is useful to know average salary, average age, average sco or average speed. It is a way of calculating the middle of a group of numbers. Anything that can be measured has an average. However, the average can also hide as much as it shows. For example, let's compare two neighborhoods. Neighborhood A has ten households with an average income of $111,300. Neighborhood B has ten (2) households with an average income of $71,500. Just looking at these averages, which would you say is the richest neighborhood? Most people would of course say Neighborhood A. However, if we look at the (3) data more closely, we will see a very different picture.

I	Neighbor	hood A (US$ in th	ousands)
	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	Average
	10	10	12	12	12	13	14	15	15	1,000	111
1	Neighbor	hood B (US$ in th	ousands)

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	Average
20	45	50	60	80	80	80	100	100	100	72

Here, we can see that in Neighborhood A, most families have an income of less than $15,000, but in Neighborhood B the lowest income is $20,000. The problem with the average for Neighborhood A is the very rich household at number 10. Number 10 is known as an outlier, because it lies outside all the other numbers in the group. This brings up the average by a very (4) amount. This is because the average used here is mean: we add up all the incomes and divide by the number of households. This is the most common way to calculate an average. If we used (5) ways to find the average, we might get a more useful picture. For example, the median looks at the middle income (halfway between 5 and 6), which is $12,500 for A and $80,000 for B. The mode looks at the most common income, which is $12,000 for Neighborhood A and $80,000 again for Neighborhood B. Looking at these other ways of measuring the average, most people would say that Neighborhood B is now the richer of the two.

This (6) shows us that, although very useful, something as simple as an average can hide as much information as it shows. When reading statistics, it is very important to look behind the simple numbers and ask more questions, such as what average is being used, are there any outliers and are the statistics being used to confuse us or help us.

問1 文中の(4)~(6)に入る語句として最も適切なものを下の①~④の中から一つ選び、そ の番号で答えなさい。
